Dear Veterans and The City of Prairie View:

I am honored to join with you this Veterans Day to recognize the brave men and women who have devoted their time to selfless service to our great nation. Each year, Veterans Day offers us the opportunity to honor all of those who have served this country in war or peace. Today, we thank these heroes for their sacrifices.

The theme for this year's Veterans Day is: "Service." Our men and women in uniform know more than anyone else that we are only able to live in freedom because of dangers they endure. My father served as a bombardier on a B-17 whose squadron, among many others, participated in the D-Day air campaign. He was just one of the tens of thousands of young American patriots who answered the call to serve. It was my father and his love of service to our great nation that has always inspired me to do the same. Today, I am continuously inspired by the men and women who have served, or are serving, in the military of the United States of America. They carry our values of humility, honor, duty, and loyalty with them in everyday life.

Veterans take the lessons learned and experiences gained from active duty and continue their service to our nation by strengthening our communities.

For many, these patriots are members of our family, friends, and neighbors. Today, we take a pause to remember their extraordinary sacrifice. I encourage you to join with me this Veterans Day in thanking all of those who have made the ultimate sacrifice of service to our country and those who risked their lives for our freedoms. I want to personally thank WWII veteran Luther Francis for his service to our country. God bless each of you and God bless those who have served and are still serving the military of the United States of America.

Sincerely,

Michael T. McCaul
Member of Congress
